Man doing life alone

Burnout is often a byproduct of isolation. If you're not in close community, you don't hear the truth.

You don't get to be fully alive if you're fully alone.

Agreements

Out of these wounds and failures, the enemy comes at us with lies - “this is who you are” - and if we hear it enough and listen to the wrong voice, we can come to agree with it.

The wounds come and they seem to carry the same message particular to your story. John's is "You're on your own, you don't need anyone".

The wounding shapes us.

If we come to accept the lies and distortions of our enemy or the world, we often take the next enslaving step of making agreements ... thus giving him a stronghold in our lives.

If we make an agreement with the liar, we become enslaved to it.

In spiritual warfare, it is our agreements with lies that give the enemy this unfair advantage.

We open the door to this by engaging with him and listening to his lies rather than listening to the Father.

Who told you that you were naked?

If the stories of your life – of loss, abandonment, abuse, insult, injury - are not entered into, you can be assured evil will enter them with haunting accusations. It has already, and it will continue to do so.
